WAVEGUARD at the Biohacker Summit in Amsterdam.

Amsterdam. Biohacking is a growing international trend. From October 15-16, "The World's Top Optimal Humans Performance Conference" took place in Amsterdam. The Biohacker Summit is one of the world's biggest biohacking event, bringing together health and wellness companies, medical professionals, technology experts, health investors, tech entrepreneurs, academics, nutritionists, personal trainers and other health and wellness pioneers.

Biohacking is defined for better and longer living through the use of biological and technological tools from science, technology and nature using genetics, epigenetics, physiology, nutrition and bioinformatics to elevate physical and mental performance and well-being to new levels.

For the first time Hagen Thiers (developer of the Qi technology and owner) and Robert Krahl (CEO) of WAVEGUARD were present .

Robert was enthusiastic:" We were surprised about the great demand and our products with the proven Qi technology attracted a lot of attention. In addition, the area -the direct environment of the person- could not yet be protected in this form and thus completes biohacking in an optimal way."

We had many discussions and made a lot of new contacts. Hagen was also very satisfied with the Summit. "We are always developing our products further. And the response at the Amsterdam Summit confirmed us in this!"

Next up is the iENA, the international inventors' fair in Nuremberg, Germany, at the end of October.
